

Project Evaluation

Why should NSF grantees do evaluation? There are two very important answers to this question. First and foremost, evaluation provides information to help improve the project. Information on whether goals are being met and on how different aspects of a project are working are essential to a continuous improvement process. In addition, and equally important, evaluation frequently provides new insights or new information that was not anticipated. What are frequently called “unanticipated consequences” of a program are among the most useful outcomes of the assessment enterprise.

Evaluation provides information to help improve a project.

Over the years, evaluation has frequently been viewed as an adversarial process. Its main use has been to provide a “thumbs-up” or “thumbs-down” about a program or project. In this role, it has all too often been considered by program or project directors and coordinators as an external imposition that is threatening, disruptive, and not very helpful to project staff. While that may be true in some situations, evaluations need not be, and most often are not, conducted in an adversarial mode.

*Evaluations
need not be conducted in an adversarial
mode.*

The current view of evaluation stresses the inherent interrelationships between evaluation and program implementation. Evaluation is not separate from, or added to, a project, but rather is part of it from the beginning. Planning, evaluation, and implementation are all parts of a whole, and they work best when they work together. Exhibit 1 shows the interaction between evaluation and other aspects of your NSF project.
