Abstract

This paper explored the perceived scope and approaches of curriculum supervision in selected senior high schools in the Central Region of Ghana. Descriptive survey was adopted for the study. Non-probability sampling method (purposive and convenience sampling techniques) was used to select the respondents for the study. Questionnaire was used to elicit responses from both curriculum leaders and teachers. Primarily, descriptive statistics were used to analyze the data collected. Frequency and percentages in tables were adopted to present various perceptions held by curriculum leaders and teachers on the scope and approaches of curriculum supervision. It was concluded that curriculum supervision should follow stipulated rules and that selective curriculum supervision process should be applied in relation to individual teacher's needs/challenges. It was recommended that ensuring compliance with the rules should be considered as a major purpose of curriculum supervision. Also, the scope of curriculum supervision should not only be limited to the classroom but to the activities outside the classroom which have influence on the teaching and learning interaction.

1. Introduction

The article has the following arrangement: firstly, an introduction that shows the background of the essential knowledge to the study; secondly, it presents a review of literature pertaining to the study on forms and approaches to curriculum supervision; thirdly, a methodology of the research is presented; results and its discussion are presented in the fourth part and finally the conclusions with recommendations of the work are shown in the last chapter.

Curriculum supervision is intended to embrace those activities in the school which directly involve the implementation, monitoring, evaluation and appraisal of the school curriculum. Curriculum supervision therefore involves observation of teaching and learning, assisting teachers in their professional development, both in individual and group context, evaluation of teachers, research and revision of the curriculum (Education Encyclopaedia, 2009).

Various issues relating to curriculum supervision have proved quite controversial. The controversy stems from the different conceptions held by curriculum leaders and teachers about the nature, approaches, importance, and practice of curriculum supervision within different educational delivery settings. Educational systems and institutional frameworks differ for sure. Nevertheless, with all of their differences, there should be singleness of an ultimate purpose to engender a sound and functional curriculum delivery. However, there is an obvious lack of professional unity among supervisors and supervisees on effective and acceptable scope and approaches to curriculum supervision.

According to Cobbold, Kofie, Bordon, & Eshun (2015a:26), effective curriculum supervision thrives on both supervisors and supervisees keeping records of all formal, as well as informal supervision sessions and providing immediate feedback. The authors further asserted that motivated staff requires less supervision and are willing to accomplish tasks. Also, mutual trust creates conditions for self-direction and self-confidence in supervisees. These are favourable conditions for curriculum supervision. Located at the heart of educational administration and management are, generally, school supervision, and more specifically, field based teacher education are discussed such as a call to reconsider where supervision takes place the necessity to develop a pedagogy of supervision 21st century trends facing clinical teacher education and the value added by university supervisors to teacher development Each of these chapters engage the supervision of student teachers through a mix of research theory and personal stories from the field As such this edited volume is designed for new supervisors veteran supervisors and supervision scholars Handbook on Teaching Social Issues Ronald W.
