Paris was a highly significant vehicle for artistic and political debate. The book presents a sustained historical study of how this school was constituted by the paintings of a diverse group of artists, by the combative field of art criticism and by the curatorial policies of galleries and state exhibitions. By thoroughly mining the extensive resources of the newspaper and art journal, press gallery and government archives, artists' writings and interviews with surviving artists and art critics, the book traces the artists' exhibitions and art critical debates that made the le de Paris a zone of aesthetic and political conflict. Through setting the le de Paris into its artistic, social and political context, Natalie Adamson demonstrates how it functioned as the defining force in French postwar art in its defence of the tradition of easel painting as well as an international point of reference for the expansion of modernism. In doing so, she presents a wholly new perspective on the vexed relationships between painting, politics and national identity in France during the two decades following World War II.
