

Edith Wharton

Edith Wharton (born Edith Newbold Jones, January 24, 1862 – August 15, 1937) was an American writer and designer. Wharton drew upon her insider's knowledge of the upper-class New York "aristocracy" to portray realistically the lives and morals of the Gilded Age. In 1907, she became the first woman to win the Pulitzer Prize in Fiction, for her novel The Age of Innocence. She was inducted into the National Academy of Arts in 1928. Among her other well-known works are The House of Mirth, the novella Ethan Frome, and several notable ghost stories.

Despite not publishing her first novel until she was forty, Wharton became an extraordinarily productive writer. In addition to her 15 novels, seven novellas, and eighty-five short stories, she published poetry, books on design, travel, travel and lecture notes, and a memoir.

Many of Wharton's novels are characterized by subtle irony, and she is often credited with being the first to use the term "social realism" in her writing. Her work is considered a classic of American literature.

Wharton's novels, such as The House of Mirth and Ethan Frome, are set in the Gilded Age, a time of extreme wealth and social inequality in the United States. The novels explore the lives of the upper class, their values, and their struggles. Wharton's writing is characterized by its realism and its focus on the social and economic conditions of the time. Her novels are often set in New York City, and they provide a detailed and accurate picture of the lives of the upper class in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Industrial Revolution and the Arts
The Industrial Revolution was a period of rapid change in the world. It brought about the invention of the steam engine, the factory system, and the modern city. It also brought about the rise of the novel as a form of literature. The novel was a new way of telling stories, and it was often used to explore the social and economic conditions of the time. Wharton's novels are a good example of this. They are set in the Gilded Age, a time of extreme wealth and social inequality, and they explore the lives of the upper class and their struggles.
