

Bank Leasing - Introduction (10 to 20 min)

- 1. What are the two parties to a lease agreement: the lessee and the lessor. What kind of financing solutions are going to be created. What kind of the party depending on the type of asset that company is looking for: tangible or intangible assets on the lease.
- 2. Importance of the provisions of the lease agreement, as these will be important for a lessee as a legal lessee and operating lease. Lease-based finance is a concept that finds its origin in the lease-based finance (LBF) and other arrangements.
- 3. LBF and LBF strategies are similar to operating lease-like but with significant structural differences. Mainly, distinguishing with lease agreements, these cases of a lease agreement: agreement is not entered for a certain long period, the lease is not a financial liability, what the leaseholder is allowed under lease-based payments for the lease, getting to see all the lease-related financing arrangements. (Introduction to Chapter 2.2, all related items)
- 4. Operating lease is an important lease asset for a company that has a lease-based financing-based business as a financial asset of keeping debt ratios. (Introduction)

Introduction (10 min) / 10 to 20 min

- 1. Lease-based financing for lease - Introduction
 - 1. Lease-based financing - A lease is characterized by periodic (often monthly) lease payments and fixed lease term. Lease agreement, lease-based and structured capitalizing the fixed lease payments (interest) under terms of the lease.
 - 2. Lease-based financing - A lease is a form of financing that is based on the lease agreement and changing economic conditions. If the leased property is likely to become obsolete before the end of the lease term, the lease agreement and periodic payments are made in and replacement of the property. The lease payments are made over the entire term of the lease while providing the leaseholder with the ability to improve the financial structure and performance.
- 2. Advantages of leasing for the lessee
 - 1. Reduced risk - Leasing is a form of financing that does not require the lessee to provide collateral or provide security. In lease agreements, the lessee is not required to provide any collateral or security. The lease agreement is a form of financing that does not require the lessee to provide any collateral or security.
 - 2. Flexibility - The lease agreement often provides for a long-term lease, allowing the lessee to lease the leased property for a long term. If the lease term is long, the lessee can lease the leased property for a long term, thus the lessee can lease the leased property for a long term.
 - 3. Low cost - Leasing is a form of financing that does not require the lessee to provide any collateral or security. In lease agreements, the lessee is not required to provide any collateral or security.
 - 4. Highly protected value - In lease-based financing, the lessee is not required to provide any collateral or security. In lease-based financing, the lessee is not required to provide any collateral or security.
