Power and Risk in Policymaking Josephine Adekola, 2019-08-22 This book presents detailed accounts of policymaking in contemporary risk communication. Specifically, it expands on the understanding of the policy decision making process where there is little or no evidential base and where multiple interpretations, power dynamics, and values shape the interpretation of public health risk issues. The book argues that public health risk communication is a process embedded within multiple dimensions of power and sets out a practical way forward for public health risk communication. Kenya National Assembly Official Record (Hansard), 2012-02-15 The official records of the proceedings of the Legislative Council of the Colony and Protectorate of Kenya, the House of Representatives of the Government of Kenya, and the National Assembly of the Republic of Kenya.

The Neonatal Immune System: A Unique Host-Microbial Interface Joseph M. Bliss, James L. Wynn, 2018-01-25 Emerging from the protective environment of the uterus, the newborn is exposed to a myriad of microbes and quickly establishes a complex microbiome that shapes the infant's biology in ways that are only now beginning to come to light. Among these exposures are a number of potential pathogens. The host responses to these pathogens in the neonatal period are unique, reflecting a developing immune system. Even with delivery at term, preterm infants are delivered at a time when host defense mechanisms are even less developed and therefore face additional risk. As such, the organisms that cause disease in this period are different from the pathogens that are common in other age groups or the disease they cause manifests in a more severe fashion. Developmental alterations in both innate and adaptive immune responses in neonates have been documented among many cell types and pathways over the last several decades. Contemporary insights into the human immune system and methodologies that allow an omics approach to these questions have continued to provide new information regarding the mechanisms that underlie the human neonate as an immunocompromised host. This Research Topic highlights studies related to this unique host-pathogen interface. Contributions include those related to the innate or adaptive immune system of neonates, their response to microbial colonization or infection, and/or the pathogenesis of microbes causing disease in neonates.

Food Literacy Helen Vidgen, 2016-04-14 Globally, the food system and the relationship of the individual to that system continues to change and grow in complexity. Eating is an everyday event that is part of everyone's lives. There are many commentaries on the nature of these changes to what, where, and how we eat and their socio-cultural, environmental, educational, economic, and health consequences. Among this discussion, the term food literacy has emerged to acknowledge the broad role food and eating play in our lives and the empowerment that comes from meeting food needs well. In this book, contributors from Australia, China, United Kingdom, and North America provide a review of international research on food literacy and how this can be applied in schools, health care settings, and public education and communication at the individual, group, and population level. These varying perspectives will give the reader an introduction to this emerging concept. The book gathers current insights and provides a platform for discussion to further understanding and application in this field It stimulates the reader to conceptualise what food literacy means to their practice and to critically review its potential contribution to a range of outcomes Probiotic Research in Therapeutics

Kavita Beri,Parneet Kaur Deol,Simarjot Kaur Sandhu,2021-11-22 Recent research in science establishes a direct relation between human gut and skin Several species of live microbes inhabit the human skin and intestines which far outnumbers the mammalian cells in the human body Research interest of Nextgen scientists is focused on beneficially harnessing this microbial population to address skin disorders like acne rosacea eczema premature aging and skin cancer which are established to be a result of skin microbiome dysbiosis This volume highlights evidence based endeavours of the scientific community in this sector Currently there is no concrete literature which gives a detailed vision on the relationship between gut microbiota and skin related disorders This volume is an attempt to put together available data in the area and demonstrate usefulness of probiotics as a new therapeutic option for management of these skin diseases which currently show poor prognosis high cost of treatment and compromised quality of life of the patient Advances in Food and

By-Products Processing Towards a Sustainable Bioeconomy Nikolaos Kopsahelis,Vasiliki Kachrimanidou,2019-12-31 The bioeconomy initially focused on resource substitution including the production of biomass from various resources its conversion fractionation and processing by means of biotechnology and chemistry and process engineering towards the production and marketing of food feed fuel and fibre Nevertheless although resource substitution is still considered important the emphasis has been recently shifted to the biotechnological innovation perspective of the bioeconomy in terms that ensure environmental sustainability It is estimated that around one third of the food produced for human consumption is wasted throughout the world posing not only a sustainability problem related to food security but also a significant environmental problem Food waste streams mainly derived from fruits and vegetables cereals oilseeds meat dairy and fish processing have unavoidably attracted the interest of the scientific community as an abundant reservoir of complex carbohydrates proteins lipids and functional compounds which can be utilized as raw materials for added value product formulations This Special Issue focuses on innovative and emerging food and by products processing methods for the sustainable transition to a bioeconomy era Contributions addressing valorisation the bioprocessing and biorefining of food industry based streams the isolation of high added value compounds applications of resulting bio based chemicals to food products novel food formulations economic policies for food waste management and sustainability or technoeconomic analyses of the proposed processing methods are welcome in this Special Issue Legislative Establishment Appropriation Bill United States.
