Abstract. The authors studied the neuroendocrine aspects of stress response. Measurements for both stress and the endocrine system were made in 100 subjects in order to establish the connection and define specific stress states and their neuroendocrine characteristics. The results show that stress is a complex phenomenon and that the neuroendocrine system is involved in the response. The authors conclude that the neuroendocrine system is involved in the response to stress and that the neuroendocrine system is involved in the response to stress.
