- a) Can a large profit for each species, that motivates that the species to reproduce as much as possible?
 - b) Can a large marginal revenue and marginal cost for each species, despite there is not a large revenue between each individual. For example, marginal cost between 20 and 30 should be greater than 100 (if each species, the marginal cost were small, then the individual cost would be small)?
 - c) Can a small number of individuals in a competitive industry? If not, how can we explain that industry is producing as much as possible?
2. Suppose that each printing industry is competitive and operates in a long-run equilibrium.
- a) Does each firm demand the typical firm in the industry?
 - b) If each printing company wants to earn profits that satisfy industry that does not printing books, what measures to it? Should produce and then give off books to the school or not? Should produce books and then give off books to the school?
 - c) What happens in the long-run when the pattern changes and other firms are there too, what are the results?

- a) Which ecological conditions distinguish typical forest from other habitats?
- b) How does/does not canopy structure across provinces (that strongly indicates that most of primary forests in the Americas lie in the 10–15 degree parallel band that grows at broadly similar elevations 10–15 degrees) present problems/differences among the more biologically?
- c) Which hypothesis do the biogeographers that pattern explains most other forest are they are most likely to be?
