Principles and Methods for Accelerated Catalyst Design and Testing E.G. Derouane,Valentin Parmon,Francisco Lemos,Fernando Ramôa Ribeiro,2012-12-06 High throughput experimentation has met great success in drug design but it has so far been scarcely used in the field of catalysis We present in this book the outcome of a NATO ASI meeting that was held in Vilamoura Portugal between July 15 and 28 2001 with the objective of delineating and consolidating the principles and methods underpinning accelerated catalyst design evaluation and development There is a need to make the underlying principles of this new methodology more widely understood and to make it available in a coherent and integrated format The latter objective is particularly important to the young scientists who will constitute the new catalysis researchers generation Indeed this field which is at the frontier of fundamental science and may be a renaissance for catalysis is one which is much more complex than classical catalysis itself It implies a close collaboration between scientists from many disciplines chemistry physics chemical and mechanical engineering automation robotics and scientific computing in general In addition this emerging area of science is also of paramount industrial importance as progress in this area would collapse the time necessary to discover new catalysts or improve existing ones Urban Air Pollution Modelling Michael M. Benarie, 2015-12-26 This book brings together the methods models and formulae used for estimating air pollution concentrations in urban areas From the Foreword The visible effects of pollution in most cities in the developed countries have been reduced dramatically in the past thirty years This has been achieved to a large extent by the replacement of most of the low level sources which burnt raw coal by more modern appliances using gas electricity or low sulphur oil The killer smog of 1952 could not be repeated unless there were to be a massive return to old fashioned heating methods due for example to excessive environmental constraints being applied to the more modern energy sources It is important therefore to judge the impact of a new source in terms of its effect on the pattern of existing sources One should also consider the environmental consequences of rejecting the new installation and examine the alternatives that its product may either be denied to the community at large produced elsewhere or produced using existing facilities These facilities are probably less efficient and may therefore produce more pollution per unit of product than the new plant would An objective quantitative urban air pollution model is clearly an essential component in such a decision making process Dr Benarie has produced a distillation of existing modelling techniques which will I hope become the launching pad for many future models As each city is unique it will need its own tailor made model drawing on the best and the most appropriate techniques developed previously Agreement with observations is the only real test of validity because the physics and chemistry are so complicated that theoretical arguments are reduced to the role of assisting in the best formulation of the problem Numerical precision must always rely on measurement This is the approach that Dr Benarie has adopted David J Moore Central Electricity Research Laboratories Leatherhead Surrey UK
