Earthquake-Induced Structural Pounding Robert Jankowski, Sayed Mahmoud, 2015-03-14 This book analyzes different approaches to modeling earthquake induced structural pounding and shows the results of the studies on collisions between buildings and between bridge segments during ground motions Aspects related to the mitigation of pounding effects as well as the design of structures prone to pounding are also discussed Earthquake induced structural pounding between insufficiently separated buildings and between bridge segments has been repeatedly observed during ground motions. The reports after earthquakes indicate that it may result in limited local damage in the case of moderate seismic events or in considerable destruction or even the collapse of colliding structures during severe ground motions. Pounding in buildings is usually caused by the differences in dynamic properties between structures which make them vibrate out of phase under seismic excitation. In contrast, in the case of longer bridge structures, it is more often the seismic wave propagation effect that induces collisions between superstructure segments during earthquakes.

Multi-hazard Approaches to Civil Infrastructure Engineering Paolo Gardoni, James M. LaFave, 2016-06-22 This collection focuses on the development of novel approaches to address one of the most pressing challenges of civil engineering, namely the mitigation of natural hazards. Numerous engineering books to date have focused on and illustrate considerable progress toward mitigation of individual hazards: earthquakes, wind, and so forth. The current volume addresses concerns related to overall safety, sustainability, and resilience of the built environment when subject to multiple hazards: natural disaster events that are concurrent and either correlated (e.g., wind and surge) or uncorrelated (e.g., earthquake and flood), cascading (e.g., fire following earthquake) or uncorrelated and occurring at different times (e.g., wind and earthquake). The authors examine a range of specific topics, including methodologies for vulnerability assessment of structures, new techniques to reduce the system demands through control systems, instrumentation, monitoring, and condition assessment of structures and foundations, new techniques for repairing structures that have suffered damage during past events or for structures that have been found in need of strengthening, development of new design provisions that consider multiple hazards, as well as questions from law and the humanities relevant to the management of natural and human-made hazards.
