Orchestrating a Resource-aware Edge Klervie Toczé, 2024-09-02 More and more services are moving to the cloud attracted by the promise of unlimited resources that are accessible anytime and are managed by someone else However hosting every type of service in large cloud datacenters is not possible or suitable as some emerging applications have stringent latency or privacy requirements while also handling huge amounts of data Therefore in recent years a new paradigm has been proposed to address the needs of these applications the edge computing paradigm Resources provided at the edge e.g. for computation and communication are constrained hence resource management is of crucial importance The incoming load to the edge infrastructure varies both in time and space Managing the edge infrastructure so that the appropriate resources are available at the required time and location is called orchestrating This is especially challenging in case of sudden load spikes and when the orchestration impact itself has to be limited This thesis enables edge computing orchestration with increased resource awareness by contributing with methods techniques and concepts for edge resource management First it proposes methods to better understand the edge resource demand Second it provides solutions on the supply side for orchestrating edge resources with different characteristics in order to serve edge applications with satisfactory quality of service Finally the thesis includes a critical perspective on the paradigm by considering sustainability challenges To understand the demand patterns the thesis presents a methodology for categorizing the large variety of use cases that are proposed in the literature as potential applications for edge computing The thesis also proposes methods for characterizing and modeling applications as well as for gathering traces from real applications and analyzing them These different approaches are applied to a prototype from a typical edge application domain Mixed Reality The important insight here is that application descriptions or models that are not based on a real application may not be giving an accurate picture of the load This can drive incorrect decisions about what should be done on the supply side and thus waste resources Regarding resource supply the thesis proposes two orchestration frameworks for managing edge resources and successfully dealing with load spikes while avoiding over provisioning The first one utilizes mobile edge devices while the second leverages the concept of spare devices Then focusing on the request placement part of orchestration the thesis formalizes it in the case of applications structured as chains of functions so called microservices as an instance of the Traveling Purchaser Problem and solves it using Integer Linear Programming Two different energy metrics influencing request placement decisions are proposed and evaluated Finally the thesis explores further resource awareness Sustainability challenges that should be highlighted more within edge computing are collected Among those related to resource use the strategy of sufficiency is promoted as a way forward It involves aiming at only using the needed resources no more no less with a goal of reducing resource usage Different tools to adopt it are proposed and their use demonstrated through a case study
