Hasselblad D-FLASH 40 (35185)

The Hasselblad D-FLASH 40 is a dedicated flash for Hasselblad cameras with automatic TTL/AFM flash control. The flash is connected directly to the TTL sensor on the camera body without any need for an adapter. It is designed for the utmost simplicity in use as well as versatility and flexibility for various lighting conditions, especially suited for portraits, news coverage and sports. The adjustable reflector is ideal for the full experimental lighting system description of the image without any additional means.

The reflector can easily be adjusted for use with normal or wide-angle lenses or removed entirely for "Beam-Build" use, i.e. extreme wide-angle applications. The flash head can be tilted and swivelled for indirect lighting, and also tilted down for clipping work.

There are three different power supply alternatives available: 4 AA (LR6) alkaline batteries, corresponding rechargeable NiCd batteries or a rechargeable external power pack, available as accessories. The external power pack is mainly intended for demanding professional use, providing a large number of flashes and requiring a very short recharging interval between flashes.
