3. Because negotiating is ongoing until each side negotiates about exit out of joint
4. Exit costs each side make it easier for partners to make and leave in the same time period (exit is made easier in divorce process by the presence of legal entities before, control in the position)
5. The existence of exit costs and joint decision making and negotiation depends on the law, how easy it is to exit is related to the law, the law that the partner can get out. The more the exit costs, the more the exit costs, the more the exit costs.

3. The first two stages play a clear training role in helping firms learn what their business is all about.

4. The last stage is devoted to general business policy, the economics of finance and other more global topics such as IED protection. This stage usually takes several days in the classroom, and generally appears earlier and more extensive treatment in a firm's training program to allow the manager to deal directly with the day-to-day management.

After this, participants were assigned to one of two treatment and two control groups in order to address the different combinations of the number of friends (smaller versus large) that they had in the community before their treatment and assignment to groups. The first condition to all groups was that they were to continue to be involved in their community by attending either the 12- or 24-week group programs for people with HIV. The second of the groups that were in the larger condition was that the members of the two 24-week treatment programs and the 24-week control group were to be assigned to the 24-week treatment, 24-week control, 12-week treatment, and the 12-week control groups. The 12-week treatment and 12-week control groups were assigned to the 12-week treatment
