

ANSWERS AND EXPLANATIONS

Each time a person enters the room, the computer generates a number between 1 and 100 randomly. Sometimes, every time the person enters, it shows the same value. The first time the ball rolled, it was 1 and another 100 times, the computer never generated a new number. It kept showing 1 because that ball rolled. That number happened to appear the most often in that experiment.

However, the distribution was not uniform, and the computer kept the generated number and generated another 100,000 times. Each time, it generated a new number, and each time, it kept the number. It continued generating the new number, keeping the number that had the highest frequency.

The number that occurred the most often appeared the highest value, and the number that occurred the least often appeared the lowest. The number that occurred the most often was 1, and the number that occurred the least often was 100. The number that occurred the most often was 1, and the number that occurred the least often was 100. The number that occurred the most often was 1, and the number that occurred the least often was 100.
