

Module 4 – Physical Fitness Tests

In this lesson, you will be able to determine your current level of fitness. Through the different physical fitness tests, you will discover which fitness components your body is lacking in. Knowing about your weaknesses allows you to develop your fitness program in the right way to improve the fitness, as well as what is.

At the end of this module, you will be able to:

1. describe the different types of tests for performance for each health-related fitness component;
2. determine which fitness component your body needs improvement on;
3. discover your current physical fitness level through specific fitness-related fitness tests;
4. determine which fitness component you need to improve and which fitness-related health-related fitness components are related to the different activities that improve each fitness component;
5. perform the physical fitness tests efficiently and accurately; and
6. recognize and understand the testing results and what the improvement in your current fitness level is compared to the current level of physical fitness assessment tests.

Within this module, you will be provided with activities that specifically target each health-related fitness component. These activities will allow you to see how the different health-related fitness components are related to each fitness component.

Physical Fitness Tests

Physical Fitness Tests are activities that are designed to assess your current level of fitness.

The different assessment techniques measure the different health-related fitness components that you possess.
