

14.1 To check the clutch pedal free play, measure the distance between the natural resting place of the pedal and point where you encounter resistance

7 With the car standing on its wheels, have an assistant turn the steering wheel back-and-forth about an eighth of a turn each way. There should be very little, if any, lost movement between the steering wheel and roadwheels. If this is not the case, closely observe the joints and mountings previously described, but in addition, check the steering column universal joints for wear, and the steering gear itself.

Strut/shock absorber

8 Check for any signs of fluid leakage around the suspension strut/shock absorber body, or from the rubber gaiter around the piston rod. Should any fluid be noticed, the suspension strut/shock absorber is defective internally, and should be renewed. Note: Suspension struts/shock absorbers should always be renewed in pairs on the same axle, or the handling of the vehicle will be adversely affected.

9 The efficiency of the suspension strut/shock absorber may be checked by bouncing the vehicle at each corner. Generally speaking, the body will return to its normal position and stop after being depressed. If it rises and returns on a rebound, the suspension strut/shock absorber is probably suspect. Examine also the suspension strut/shock absorber upper and lower mountings for any signs of wear.

14 Clutch pedal check and adjustment

1 Pressing down lightly on the clutch pedal, measure the distance that it moves freely before the clutch resistance is felt (see illustration). The freeplay should be approximately 5.0 mm. If it isn't proceed as follows:

- 2 Slacken the locknut on the pedal end of the clutch pushrod.
- 3 Turn the pushrod until the pedal freeplay is correct, and then tighten the locknut.
- 4 After adjusting the freeplay, check the pedal height from the centre of the pedal pad to the footwell metal floor. The distance should be 142.0 to 152.0 mm.

14.5a The clutch pedal pushrod play, pedal height and free play adjustments are made by slackening the locknut and turning the threaded adjuster

5 If the pedal height is incorrect, slacken the locknut and turn the stop bolt until the height is correct (see illustrations). Tighten the locknut.

15 Pollen filter check

- 1 Remove the glovebox as described in Chapter 11.
- 2 Reach inside the glovebox aperture, release the retaining clips and remove the cover from the filter housing (see illustration).
- 3 Withdraw the filter from the housing, noting the position of the arrow on the front of the filter (see illustration). Check the condition of the filter, and renew it if dirty.
- 4 Wipe clean the inside of the housing and fit the pollen filter element, making sure that it is correctly fitted, as noted on removal.
- 5 Refit the pollen filter cover, making sure it is securely fitted.
- 6 Refit the glovebox as described in Chapter 11.

15.2 unclip the pollen filter cover

16 Road test

Instruments and electrical equipment

- 1 Check the operation of all instruments and electrical equipment.
- 2 Make sure that all instruments read correctly, and switch on all electrical equipment in turn to check it functions properly.

Steering and suspension

- 3 Check for any abnormalities in the steering, suspension, handling or road 'feel'.
- 4 Drive the vehicle, and check that there are no unusual vibrations or noises.
- 5 Check that the steering feels positive, with no excessive 'sloppiness', or roughness, and check for any suspension noises when cornering, or when driving over bumps.

Drivetrain

- 6 Check the performance of the engine, clutch, transmission and driveshafts.
- 7 Listen for any unusual noises from the engine, clutch and transmission.
- 8 Make sure the engine idles smoothly, and that there is no hesitation when accelerating.
- 9 Check that the clutch action is smooth and progressive, that the drive is taken up smoothly, and that the pedal travel is not
