Revue française de droit administratif, 1994 Associations d'habitants et urbanisation : l'exemple lyonnais, 1880-1983 Thierry Joliveau, 1987-01-01 T00:00:00+01:00 Les associations d'habitants qu'elles soient comités de quartier ou associations de défense du cadre de vie et de l'environnement sont depuis les années soixante dix l'avant-scène des débats sur les politiques urbaines Elles ont obtenu les faveurs aussi bien des journalistes que des chercheurs Lyon mais certainement aussi dans d'autres villes de France elles ont une histoire bien plus ancienne que l'intérêt qu'elles suscitent En avoir une meilleure connaissance devrait enrichir notre vision du processus d'urbanisation présent passé et futur La perspective historique permet de replacer l'action des associations contemporaines dans une histoire qui la relativise tout en l'éclairant Depuis la fin du siècle dernier tout a changé les modes de recrutement et les caractéristiques sociales des membres le type de fonctionnement interne ou de liaisons avec les autres groupes et avec les institutions locales les formes d'action et la logique spatiale des interventions Et pourtant une permanence sous-tend aussi cette histoire et permet de dégager une forme associative aux caractéristiques stables dont les déterminants risquent de marquer durablement le futur La perspective géographique est indispensable car la logique fondamentale des associations est spatiale Jusqu'ici le processus de territorialisation dans l'espace lyonnais était peu connu et peu étudié. L'espace est la fois objet et moyen de l'action des associations qui agissent toutes les échelles : quartier, commune, agglomération, voire région. Ainsi s'offre au géographe un champ d'analyse très riche sur la délimitation des espaces revendiqués, les images produites, les stratégies spatiales et sociales qui conduisent l'action des associations. La lumière du cas lyonnais : certaines analyses sociologiques sont révisées en particulier sur la naissance de la planification urbaine en France, la fonction des équipements collectifs en milieu urbain et le rôle des classes moyennes dans la laboration et la mise en place des politiques urbaines.

Chapitre 12 - Circulation des modèles en Afrique : l'exemple du Bus Rapid Transit au Cap Solène BAFFI, 2024-02-14 Ce chapitre porte sur la circulation des modèles de transports urbains en Afrique. À partir de l'exemple du projet de Bus Rapid Transit (BRT) mis en œuvre au Cap, il s'attache à montrer comment ces modèles sont portés par des réseaux d'acteurs aux intérêts divers et façonnés au gré des contextes locaux, donnant lieu des inadéquations et des innovations dans les villes africaines.

Mots clés : Bus Rapid Transit, modèle urbain, bonnes pratiques, planification des transports, Le Cap, Afrique.
