Gillies Ross, 2019-07-18 Captains of whaling vessels were experienced navigators of northern waters and William Penny was in the vanguard of the whaling fraternity Leading the first maritime expedition in search of Sir John Franklin he stood out not just for his skill as a sailor but for his curiosity about northern geography and his willingness to seek out Inuit testimony to map uncharted territory Hunters on the Track describes and analyzes the efforts made by the Scottish whaling master to locate Franklin's missing expedition Bookended by an account of Penny's whaling career including the rediscovery of Cumberland Sound which would play a vital role in British whaling a decade later W Gillies Ross provides an in depth history of the first Franklin searches He reconstructs the brief but frenetic period when the English speaking world was preoccupied with locating Franklin but when the means of that search the ships chosen the route taken the evidence of Franklin's traces were contested and uncertain Ross details the particularities of each search at a time when no fewer than eight ships comprising four search expeditions were attempting to find Franklin's tracks Reconstructing events relationships and decisions he focuses on the work of Penny as commander of HMS Lady Franklin and Sophia while also outlining the events of other expeditions and interactions among the officers and crews William Penny is respected as one of the most influential and innovative figures in British Arctic whaling history but his brief role in the Franklin expedition is less known Using primary sources notably private journals from each of the expeditions Hunters on the Track places him at the forefront of a critical chapter of maritime history and the geographical exploration that began after Franklin disappeared

International Railway Congress Association,1910 English Journal ,1983 Entangled Territorialities Françoise

Dussart,Sylvie Poirier,2017-01-01 Entangled Territorialities offers vivid ethnographic examples of how Indigenous lands in Australia and Canada are tangled with governments industries and mainstream society Most of the entangled lands to which Indigenous peoples are connected have been physically transformed and their ecological balance destroyed Each chapter in this volume refers to specific circumstances in which Indigenous peoples have become intertwined with non Aboriginal institutions and projects including the construction of hydroelectric dams and open mining pits Long after the agents of resource extraction have abandoned these lands to their fate Indigenous peoples will continue to claim ancestral ties and responsibilities that cannot be understood by agents of capitalism The editors and contributors to this volume develop an anthropology of entanglement to further examine the larger debates about the vexed relationships between settlers and indigenous peoples over the meaning knowledge and management of traditionally owned lands
