According to the author, the main reason for the failure of the 1990s was the lack of a clear vision of the future. The author argues that the lack of a clear vision led to a lack of direction and a lack of focus. The author also argues that the lack of a clear vision led to a lack of commitment and a lack of effort. The author concludes that the lack of a clear vision was the main reason for the failure of the 1990s.

It has been argued that the use of the term "disorder" is inappropriate in the context of the DSM-5, as it implies a medical condition. The authors of the DSM-5 have responded to this criticism by stating that the term "disorder" is used to describe a pattern of behavior that is problematic and causes distress or impairment. They argue that the term is not intended to imply a medical condition, but rather a social construct. The authors also note that the term "disorder" is used in the DSM-5 to describe a wide range of conditions, from mild to severe, and that the term is used in a way that is consistent with the DSM-5's goal of providing a common language for mental health professionals.
