Jasper Jones - Themes, Characterisation, and essay writing.

Themes

What are the themes in Jasper Jones?

Jasper Jones starts with a 13-year-old boy called Charlie Bucktin in his sleepout room in a fictional town called Corrigan in Western Australia in 1965(can be used in intro).

Charlie is reading in the sleepout when Jasper Jones, who is the local outcast primarily due to the racism of the town, comes tapping on his window and asks for his help. This kicks off a whodunit story exploring racism in small-town Australia.

Jasper Jones is essentially a theme = coming-of-age (Bildungsroman) =Genre (mention in intro) narrative. Through this framework, we're encouraged to look at that point where, as someone who is still growing up, you can choose to start asking those really hard life questions. You find yourself taking a fresh look at the world around you, seeing how things are and how they should be. Asking those questions can be really uncomfortable and can make you feel insecure as you start questioning the whole framework of society in Australia.

Craig Silvey, the writer of Jasper Jones, has this really great quote that basically says we can all become adults, but not all of us will grow up. To me, growing up means that you ask those tricky questions and have a look at the way the world around you really is, as opposed to sticking your head in the sand or living in a kind of fantasy world.

(Author's purpose)

Craig extends these ideas to reflect on Australia as a nation. The 1960s, when the story is set, was a point where we had all these liberation movements and perhaps thought we had grown up. But he's asking, 'have we just become adults?' Because we have a lot further to go before we truly grow up, even today.

Racism & ignorance

In 1960s Australia, non-white people were often subject to overt racism and this is clearly demonstrated in Jasper Jones. The Lu family and Jasper Jones are all subject to taunts, and even physical violence, because of their race. Both Jasper and Jeffrey are able to 'earn' the grudging respect of townsfolk because of their sporting abilities (Jasper in football, as briefly mentioned by Charlie, and Jeffrey in cricket). But this is a very shallow kind of respect, often quickly forgotten - both Jasper and Jeffrey continue to be called names and face discrimination - much like some of Australia's current Aboriginal sporting heroes!

The play suggests that racism is often paired with ignorance and a lack of understanding. Characters who seek knowledge and understanding, like Charlie and Mr Bucktin, are less likely to act in a discriminatory way towards others than most of the townsfolk. Many of the townsfolk have made assumptions about who Jasper and the Lu family are based on their
