

Problem 1: Work, Power, and Kinetic Energy

Diagram

An engine (battery) with work, power, and kinetic energy and the relationship between work and power.

Part 1: Work and Power

Let's consider two ~~different~~ cases, work and power, that will be useful for explaining the motion of objects. We will follow ~~conventionally~~ a ~~few~~ ~~steps~~.

Consider a box of mass m moving at speed v along a horizontal surface. (We assume no friction.)

Using algebraic symbols, we will write the relationship:

$$W = P \cdot t$$

Here the following regarding the sign of the work done:

- if the force is in the same direction as motion, the work done by the force is positive.
- if the force is opposite the direction of motion, the work done by the force is negative.
- if the force is perpendicular to the direction of motion, the work done is zero.

If the force is at an angle and the distance is d , then the work done by the force is $W = F \cdot d \cdot \cos(\theta)$.

Work done by a force is $W = F \cdot d \cdot \cos(\theta)$. The sign of the work done is:

• positive if the force is in the same direction as motion.

• negative if the force is opposite to motion.

$$W = P \cdot t$$

If work is done on an object and the force is constant, then the work done is $W = F \cdot d$.

Problem 2: Kinetic Energy and Work

Consider a box of mass m moving at speed v and using the relationship between work and power.
