Parsons,Fei Wang,2018 Reinforced concrete box culverts have mostly been installed at shallow depths under roadways for drainage The effect of traffic loads on the shallowly buried culverts is more significant than that on culverts at greater depths The distribution of traffic loads onto the culverts is used to determine the rating factors of these structures The American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials AASHTO provides three methods of load rating 1 Allowable Stress Rating ASR 2 Load Factor Rating LFR and 3 Load and Resistance Factor Rating LRFR The Load Factor Design LFD method and the Load and Resistance Factor Design LRFD method have been mostly used by Departments of Transportation DOTs to load rate the buried culverts The LFD method considers the wheel load acting as a point load on fill which is distributed onto a square area on the culvert with a width of 1.75 times the fill depth above the culvert The LRFD method suggests the wheel load be applied on a rectangular area as a tire footprint and distributed onto the culvert by increasing the tire footprint by 1.5 times the fill depth The stress distribution program developed in this project used an improved load distribution method proposed by Han Acharya Parsons and Khatri 2013 This method considers the effect of pavement type and pavement layers on the load distribution This method was used to calculate the Equivalent Live Load Distribution Factor ELLDF based on the LFD and LRFD methods This program considers the type of pavement thicknesses and elastic moduli of pavement layers and 16 types of design trucks This program computes the ELLDF for distributed loads the distributed stress and the distributed area on the buried box structure which can be input into the current AASHTO design software and enable the software to consider the pavement effect on the live load distribution onto the buried box culvert Concrete Pipe and Box Culvert Installation , Design of Single Box Culverts Azzam Khodor Agha,Karim Al Samad,2011 Standard Specification ,1991 Culvert Design Manual D. Ramsbottom,Rodney Day,C. Rickard,1997 This publication contains clear and consise guidelines for the hydraulic design of culverts and describes the hydraulic behaviour of culverts in as simple a form as is consistent with the complexities of their actual behaviour Structural Design of Box Culverts Hatem M Elbadry,2023-07-15 This manual has been developed to simplify and facilitate the structural design of box culverts and keep pace with developments in structural analysis technologies and employ them to reach the best use It is considered as a practical book suitable for the current methods used in the design and since the finite element programs have become a basic requirement for design in most of professional companies it is necessary to link these programs to the manual solutions and understand the loads analysis and outputs to reach the worst case scenarios without forgetting the economic factors which is located in the second place after safety The author has relied on the basic AASHTO LRFD Bridge Design Specification Seventh Edition 2014 For more details please visit <https://centralwestpublishing.com>

Design Automation for Box Culverts Using Web Based Application Manmeetsingh Sethi, 2015 One of the fast and economical ways of putting tunnels or stream crossings under roadways is to use box culverts Box culverts are structurally rigid easy to construct and easy to add length when needed Because of their simple geometric configuration precast concrete box culverts with various dimensions are commonly used in the U S In some cases non standard box culverts are also used for which the design document has to be produced per project design specification The design process of box culverts is relatively easy and repetitive because of their typical geometric configuration In practice engineers are following exactly the same process with different dimensions and loading conditions to design box culverts Microsoft Excel spreadsheet is therefore often used to speed up this repetitive calculation process In India many designers use STAAD Pro for the structural analysis of box culverts and bring the results of this analysis to a Microsoft Excel spreadsheet to carry out the remaining calculations However all these cases are dealt separately and a significant amount of time is used to come up with the final design In addition it has been challenging to keep all engineering calculations and drawings of a specific box culvert for its lifecycle One of the solutions that one can come up with for this challenge is to automate the entire design process in one package and keep all design documents in one location This study presents the Web based application we developed to 1 automate the box culvert design process and 2 keep all design documents in one location This Web based application is developed based on Indian Standard codes IS and Indian road congress codes IRC using ASP net This study presents how this application was developed how it is working and how it improved the design process of box culverts in our tests This study shows that results obtained from this application are very close to the traditional design process and can be successfully used for designing of box culverts in India Also the study concludes that there is a significant amount of time saving in the design process when this application is used instead of traditional design process The electronic version of this dissertation is accessible from <http://hdl.handle.net/1969.1/155015> Culvert Inspection Manual James D.
