Icons and Iconoclasm in Japanese Buddhism Pamela D. Winfield, 2013-02-20 Winner of the Association of Asian Studies Southeast Conference Book Prize 2014. Does imagery help or hinder the enlightenment experience? Does awakening involve the imagination or not? Can art ever fully represent the realization of buddhahood? In this study Pamela D. Winfield offers a fascinating comparison of two pre-modern Japanese Buddhist masters and their views on the role of imagery in the enlightenment experience. Kukai (774-835) believed that real and imagined forms were indispensable to his new esoteric Mikkyō method for becoming a Buddha in this very body (sokushin jōbutsu); yet he also deconstructed the significance of such imagery in his poetic and doctrinal works. Conversely, Dogen (1200-1253) believed that just sitting in Zen meditation without any visual props or mental elaborations could lead one to realize that this very mind is Buddha (sokushin zebutsu), but he also privileged select Zen icons as worthy of veneration. In considering the nuanced views of both Kukai and Dogen, Winfield updates previous comparisons of their oeuvres and engages their texts and images together for the first time. In so doing, she liberates them from past sectarian scholarship that has pigeonholed them into iconographic, ritual vs. philological/philosophical categories. She also restores the historical symbiosis between religious thought and artistic expression that was lost in the nineteenth-century disciplinary distinction between religious studies and art history. Finally, Winfield breaks new methodological ground by proposing space and time as organizing principles for analyzing both meditative experience and visual material culture. As a result, this study presents a wider and deeper vision of how Japanese Buddhists themselves understood the role of imagery before, during and after awakening. The Princeton Companion to Classical Japanese Literature Earl Miner, Robert E. The Bodymind Experience in Japanese Buddhism David Edward Shaner,1985-08-01 In a pioneering study David Shaner uses the resources of phenomenology to penetrate Buddhist philosophy in terms of K kai and D gen In addition to this original and rigorous methodology his work offers insights into some fundamental difficulties intrinsic to comparative studies The problem of the relation between body and mind is a prime example Shaner s observations shed a brilliant light on these traditional antinomies as they may be resolved or more accurately dissolved when seen in their appropriate contexts In addressing these issues the study also contributes to the understanding of common features that underlie the various doctrines of Japanese Buddhism This work will appeal to both East and West phenomenologists philosophers interested in the mind body problem scholars of comparative philosophy and students of Japanese philosophy and religion Nature in

Keane offers an explanation of Japanese divinity kami using sociology anthropology linguistics literature and history He presents an overview of how the Japanese have sought to love and serve their kami a quest that rivals the interest that the West gives to God The principles of interreligious dialogue are applied to the meaning of kami and a plea is made for a dialogue that respectfully accepts differences between the cultures and the theologies of Eastern and Western thought Important cultural themes are discussed as a part of this quest such as the emperors of Japan and the Japanese Tea Ceremony The work also challenges the understanding of kami as highlighted by Akutagawa Ryunosuke and Endo Shusaku
