Military Skills Development System Application Form 2016:

South Africa's Post-Apartheid Military Lindy Heineken, 2020-01-01 This timely book examines how the South African National Defence Force has adapted to the country's new security political and social environment since 1994. In South Africa's changed political state, how has civilian control of the military been implemented and what does this mean for defence in a democracy? This book presents an overview of the security environment, how the mission focus of the military has changed and the implications for force procurement, force preparation, force employment and force sustainability. The author addresses other issues such as the effect of integrating former revolutionary soldiers into a professional armed force, the effect of affirmative action on meritocracy, recruitment and retention, military veterans looking at the difficulties they face in reintegrating back into society and finding gainful employment, gender equality and mainstreaming the rise of military unions and why a confrontational instead of a more corporatist approach to labour relations has emerged. HIV/AIDS and the consequences this holds for the military in terms of its operational effectiveness. In closing, the author highlights key events that have caused the SANDF to become lost in transition and transformation, spelling out some lessons learned. The conclusions she draws are pertinent for the future of defence security and civil military relations of countries around the world. Annual Report South Africa. Department of Defence, 2016

The Long War John Morrissey, 2017 Shaping the central region for the 21st century. CENTCOM's long war. CENTCOM activates Cold War geopolitics and global ambition. Macro cognition:
The Science and Engineering of Sociotechnical Work Systems Paul Ward,Robert R. Hoffman,Gareth E. Conway,Jan

Maarten Schraagen, David Peebles, Robert J. B. Hutton, Erich J. Petushek, 2018-02-28 The increasing complexity of work systems and changes in the nature of workplace technology over the past century have resulted in an exponential shift in the nature of work activities from physical labor to cognitive work. Modern work systems have many characteristics that make them cognitively complex. They can be highly interactive, comprised of multiple agents and artifacts; information may be limited and distributed across space and time; task goals are frequently ill defined, conflicting, dynamic, and emergent; planning may only be possible at general levels of abstraction or require adaptive solutions; some degree of proficiency or expertise is required; the stakes are often high and uncertainty, time constraints, and stress are seldom absent. To complicate matters further, cognition in complex work settings is typically constrained by broader professional, organizational, and institutional practice and policy. These features of cognitive work present significant challenges to scientific methodology and theory and subsequent design of reliable interventions. Historically, philosophers and scientists have attempted to understand the mental activities experienced during cognitive work at multiple levels of analysis using divergent methods. Some have examined cognition at an associative, contextual, functional, or holistic level, relying on naturalistic methods to understand the higher mental processes as they work in harmony during goal directed behavior. Others have embraced experimental methods and favored internal over external validity, often reducing cognition to a psychology of fundamental acts such as short term memory access with millisecond shifts in attention. More recently, Macro cognition has evolved as a complementary paradigm. Macro cognitive researchers have studied the cognitive functions and processes associated with skilled, adaptive, collaborative, and resilient cognitive work in the context of the aforementioned complexities of psychotechnical and sociotechnical work systems. Typically, this research has been carried out using cognitive task analytic techniques that draw on both naturalistic and quasi experimental methods. The primary goals of research in Macro cognition are to better understand cognitive adaptations to complexity, to increase our theoretical understanding of the organism environment relations by studying the mapping between cognitive work and real world demands, and to promote use inspired research capable of improving system performance.

Policing America's Educational Systems John Harrison Watts, 2019-06-11 Policing America's Educational Systems, edited by John Harrison Watts, describes methods of policing modern educational settings covering both K-12 public school and public or private colleges and universities. Using topical examples, subject matter experts introduce the history of policing in elementary and high schools, the legal context governing educational institutions, and ways to assess risk and prevent or respond to crime, including active shooter incidents. The opening section covers primary and secondary education, while the second focuses on postsecondary educational settings. A final section offers a theoretical approach to understanding campus crime and discusses the role of counseling and mental health in keeping students safe. A concluding chapter looks at the future of policing in education. Contributors bring both academic and practitioner experience to each topic covered, and useful features include learning objectives, chapter summaries, key terms, and discussion questions that further explore the issues and controversies covered in that section This textbook is designed for courses in school or campus policing within criminal justice social work and sociology programs and is also appropriate for in service training for professionals involved in school or campus policing and safety
