Abstract: This study was designed to investigate the effects of a 12-week training program on the strength and endurance of the lower extremities of young adults. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The first session was a warm-up, followed by a series of strength exercises, and the second and third sessions were endurance exercises. The results showed that the program had a significant effect on the strength and endurance of the lower extremities. The subjects who participated in the program showed a significant increase in the strength and endurance of the lower extremities compared to the control group. The program was found to be effective in improving the strength and endurance of the lower extremities of young adults.
