History Caps November 2013 Memorandum Grade11:

Politics and Climate Change: A History Andy May, 2022-09-04 These are stories of the political corruption of science. Politicians work to forge a consensus; they use persuasion, intimidation, and avoid or suppress debate. Debating an issue leads to education; it shows the question is more complex than it appears; it makes the public consider all sides. Education leads to caution, not action. The politician wants a decision; he wants action, so no debate. Once the consensus is formed, the public votes, laws are passed, regulations issued, the minority concedes, and conflict is avoided. Science is not a belief; it exists to challenge the consensus view. It is how one person can show the overwhelming majority is mistaken. Scientists do not vote; they debate. They gather facts, make observations, and analyze the data and try to show the consensus opinion is wrong. Politicians and scientists don't mix. They are like fire and water, opposites. But what about when no one trusts the politician and he must have a scientist for back up? What happens when the government becomes the sole source of research money? We address the attempt by politicians to control scientific research and research outcomes. They do this by selectively funding projects that look for potential disasters, ideally global disasters. People love disaster stories; journalists love disaster stories; scientists love to be quoted in newspapers and on television. If you frighten people enough, they will give up their rights for security, increasing government power. So it is not surprising that as government has taken over funding scientific research, scientists have migrated from research that helps people to researching possible catastrophes, no matter how remote the possibility. Science has devolved from improving human lives to developing plots for disaster movies. Climate Governance and Urban Planning Deborah Heinen, 2022-12-08 Urban planning as a discipline is deeply integral to implementing a low carbon future. This book fosters an understanding for how the rules in use that govern urban planning influence the ability to implement low carbon development patterns. Drawing on the theoretical foundations of the climate governance and urban planning literatures, the book provides a context to understand plan implementation challenges and obstacles in metropolitan areas. As metropolitan regions across the globe seek to reduce emissions from transportation, many levels of governments have developed ambitious climate action plans that make land use and transportation recommendations in order to reduce vehicle miles traveled. Many have recommended low carbon development patterns which are characterized by intensified and diversified uses around rapid transit stations. However, the implementation of these recommendations is done within the context of different rules in use, unique to the planning systems in each metropolitan region. The book examines the rules in use in three metropolitan regions of similar demographic size: the Metro Vancouver, Puget Sound, and the Stuttgart regions. By examining the implementation of low carbon development patterns, the book focuses on growth management related questions about how to coordinate transit investments with land use decisions in metropolitan regions. The book finds that state legislation that deals with metropolitan planning and regional growth strategies can greatly aid in creating accountability among actors as well as provide a road map to navigate conflicts when implementing low carbon development.
