

Catalytic Activity of Enzymes

Introduction

Enzymes are biological molecules that catalyze (speed up) chemical reactions. You could call enzymes the “Builders and Do-ers” in the cell; without them, life could not occur. Every cell makes hundreds of different enzymes to carry out the reactions necessary for life. Fortunately for the cell, enzymes are not used up when they catalyze a reaction, but can be used over and over.

The DNA in each cell encodes all the information needed to make its many different enzymes. Enzymes are relatively large molecules of protein. They are produced whenever the cell “senses” a need for that particular enzyme; that is, whenever a job needs to be done in the cell which only that enzyme can do it.

The molecule (or molecules) on which an enzyme acts is called its substrate. Enzymes are said to be very “specific,” meaning that they recognize only one substrate (or a few closely related substrates) and convert it into a specific product. You could say that each enzyme can do only one type of job. Each enzyme is specific because it is folded into a particular three-dimensional shape. Within the folds of each enzyme is the active site, the place where the substrate fits and where the chemical reaction takes place.

Enzymes work very quickly, often catalyzing thousands of reactions per minute. The rate at which an enzyme works is influenced by many factors including temperature and pH. Enzymes have a temperature and pH at which they work best, and if an enzyme is exposed to extremes of heat or pH it won’t work at all! The interactions that hold the protein in its particular shape become disrupted under these extreme conditions, and the 3-dimensional structure unfolds. In this case, the enzyme is said to be denatured. Other important factors that influence enzyme activity are the concentration of substrate and the concentration of enzyme. Up to a point, the more substrate that is present, the faster the reaction. However, when the substrate concentration is so high that an enzyme is working as fast as it can, further increases of substrate concentration will have no effect on the rate of product formation.

Background

The enzyme that you will study in this experiment is called “catalase.” Its job is to break down its substrate hydrogen peroxide (H_2O_2), which is a naturally occurring poison. Without catalase, H_2O_2 could kill the cell. The reaction catalyzed by catalase is:

The products remaining after catalase does its job are oxygen gas and water; two very non-poisonous molecules.
