Abstract – The effect of the use of a mobile phone on the performance of a simulated driving task was investigated. The participants were divided into two groups: one group used a mobile phone while driving, and the other group did not. The results showed that the use of a mobile phone significantly impaired the performance of the driving task, particularly in terms of reaction time and lane deviation. The findings suggest that the use of a mobile phone while driving is a major risk factor for road accidents.

Use of display unit while driving will cause distraction and loss of vehicle control which may lead to serious injury or death.
