

Some websites and apps offer two-factor authentication (also known as multifactor authentication), which helps prevent other people from accessing your accounts even if they know your passwords. Passwords are the first authentication factor, and temporary, one-time verification codes are commonly a second factor. iPhone can automatically generate these verification codes without your reliance on SMS messages or additional apps.

If no suggestion appears, go to Settings > Passwords, select your account for the website or app, tap the verification code, then tap Copy Verification Code. Return to the website or app, then paste the verification code into the field.

This flow is meant for apps that use a server, can securely store a client secret, and can make server-to-server requests to the Twitch API. To get a user access token using the authorization code grant flow, your app must Get the user to authorize your app and then Use the authorization code to get a token.

The next step for the client is to obtain the refresh token/access token pair for this current completed authorization. To do that we will utilize the device_code sent in the response of the first step. This grant_type is the RFC standard urn:ietf:params:oauth:grant-type:device_code, which signals our Authorization server that the client is trying to exchange the device code for a refresh_token/access_token pair.

Before the user completes the authorization, the client cannot obtain the tokens, in this scenario we will send the following response when the client attempts to obtain the token using the device code.

Are you able to login if you open your code generator first and memorize or copy the code before attempting authenticating in 1Password? Please be sure not to switch away from 1Password at the authentication prompt. If you can authenticate this way, that's great. The developers are looking into why this is occurring.

I have a similar problem since recently. Never had problems before, but now I can't connect to my 1Password account, I get this error message "Incorrect authentication code. Make sure your device has the correct date and time."

I have a Mac Mini M1 and an iPhone 12.

It worked before on my Mac Mini, it's how I registered some browser extensions.

Hey @ag_ana :

I have tried both, and both are failing for now. Before that, both were also working perfectly.

I'm using 1Password own code generating feature, and also a third party app (Tofu), both on the iPhone and Mac Mini (because it can run iOS apps). Before that, I was also using Authy, both on my previous iPhone (first generation SE), and my Intel MacBook Pro. Authy was just a backup (like Tofu now), and I was generally using 1Password itself, without any problem.
