

Expenditures for Governmental Activities

The expenditure account is divided into three accounts: (1) expenditures for the general fund, (2) expenditures for the special fund, and (3) expenditures for the capital fund. The general fund is the fund that is used for the majority of the government's activities. The special fund is used for specific purposes, such as the purchase of equipment. The capital fund is used for the purchase of capital assets, such as land and buildings.

Expenditures for the general fund are recorded in the general fund account. Expenditures for the special fund are recorded in the special fund account. Expenditures for the capital fund are recorded in the capital fund account.
