

Economic Efficiency:

For an economic efficiency to occur goods and services need to be produced using the least amount of resources as possible, and with a stated quality (Engineering Efficiency), and this is not enough, for these goods and services to be economically efficient resources must be allocated to satisfy society's wants as fully as possible.

FIRMS:

Firms are profit maximizers, which means all firms allocate their resources to achieve maximum profit, and produce what consumer want, or else they will not be able to sell their output "outputs are optimized as per consumer preferences and taste".

In the other hand in competitive market for factor inputs, firms will hire resources up to the point where Price/ Wage = Value Of Marginal Product (VMP) for the factor input, and the demand for the factor input is dependent on the demand of the Final goods and services it produces.

This is why a scarce talent gets high Wage/income, for example a famous singer command high economic rent, in the same time receives high income because of the high demand on his scarce talent.

Households:

Households are profit maximizers as well, since they allocate their income so that = for all their expenditure, so that the last $ spent on good a return the same utility as the last $ spent on good b, c and so on.

If in any case $>$ then the law of diminishing marginal utility kicks in to adjust any imbalance, as the increase in the consumption of a good will decrease the utility received for each unit consumed, and we will be back to balance and economic efficiency.
