Inventorying Cultural Heritage Collections Sandra Vanderwarf, Bethany Romanowski, 2022-03-14 This two part text opens with an argument few collections practitioners would contest Regular inventories are central to meaningful sustainable and ethical collections preservation and access But Vanderwarf and Romanowski argue that in practice some 25 years working with diverse collections between them inventories are uncommon instead of functioning as a commonplace feature of collections care they tend to be evoked as a last resort when a museum has lost control of its collection Part I offers a flexible project management framework that illustrates strategies for reining in control of collections now From identifying objectives that best serve the collection in question to securing stakeholder support and planning time and resources Part I eliminates some guesswork around what may be an unprecedented and intensive project To maintain the benefits of a project style inventory the authors then encourage practitioners to embrace inventory as an ongoing evolving collections care function that reflects changing professional values and expectations from the communities museums serve By centering computerized databases barcoding and digital collections the authors further acknowledge these technologies as permanent evolving features of collections and inventory practice that merit increased resourcing Part II gives voice to practitioners around the world through case studies that affirm the vital role of inventories in regaining control of collections Some of these inventories occurred during the course of everyday work while others were responses to natural disasters and armed conflict Still others may be seen as expressions of social justice As much as the authors offer a guide to performing inventories thereby filling a longstanding gap in the literature they invite cultural heritage institutions to rethink how the stories held in collections can be better told and preserved through enhanced inventory practice The book will benefit seasoned museum collections practitioners as well as those who lack access to formal museology education and training The book targets stewards of cultural heritage and material culture collections with varying resources

Rodgers, 2007-05-08 This is a Foreword by an archaeologist not a conservator but as Brad Rodgers says Conservation has been steadily pulled from archaeology by the forces of specialization p 3 and he wants to remedy that situation through this manual He sees this work as a call to action for the non professional conservator permitting curators conservators and archaeologists to identify artifacts that need professional attention and allow these professionals to stabilize most artifacts in their own laboratories with minimal intervention using simple non toxic procedures p 5 It is the mission of Brad's manual to bring conservation back into archaeology p 6 The degree of success of that goal depends on the degree to which archaeologists pay attention to and put to use what Brad has to say because as he says The conservationist archaeologist is responsible to make preparation for an artifact's care even before it is excavated and after its storage into the foreseeable future a tremendous responsibility p 10 The manual is a combination of highly technical as well as common sense methods of conserving wood iron and other metals ceramics glass and stone organics and composites a far better guide to artifact conservation than was available to me when I first faced that archaeological challenge at colonial Brunswick Town North Carolina in 1958 a challenge still being faced by archaeologists today The stage of conservation in 1958 is in dramatic contrast to the procedures Brad describes in this manual conservation has indeed made great progress For instance a common procedure then was to heat the artifacts red hot in a furnace a method that made me cringe Scientific and Technical Aerospace Reports, 1976 Manual of Museum Planning Barry Lord, Gail Dexter Lord, Lindsay
