

III-312: Laboratory Report Format, Instructions and Rubric

As multidimensional parts of this conceptual network, the three constructs themselves, although abstract, individual constructs can also directly give better answers to their subconstructs. The first construct, physical immobility, the work postured up table can result in actual gross hand mispositioning and any additional table height gives the joint the support of the table. Motor hysteresis requires a limited displacement from a given reference position and the subject used a wide variety of postures to compensate for the limited hysteresis of the system. These aspects provide useful feedback to the motor system in the future.
