Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged, obese women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 women, 40 to 55 years of age, who were sedentary and obese (BMI ≥ 30). They were randomly assigned to either a supervised exercise program or a control group. The exercise program consisted of 12 weeks of low-intensity, supervised exercise, 3 times per week, for 12 weeks. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not exercise. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The physical health outcomes were measured by body mass index (BMI), waist circumference, and blood pressure. The psychological health outcomes were measured by the Beck Depression Inventory (BDI) and the State-Trait Anxiety Inventory (STAI). The results showed that the exercise program had a significant effect on BMI, waist circumference, and blood pressure. The exercise program also had a significant effect on the BDI and STAI scores. The exercise program was found to be effective in improving the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged, obese women.
