November,2012-06-01 Winner of the Computer History Museum Prize of the Special Interest Group Computers Information and Society Imagine biology and medicine today without computers What would laboratory work be like if electronic databases and statistical software did not exist Would disciplines like genomics even be feasible if we lacked the means to manage and manipulate huge volumes of digital data How would patients fare in a world absent CT scans programmable pacemakers and computerized medical records Today computers are a critical component of almost all research in biology and medicine Yet just fifty years ago the study of life was by far the least digitized field of science its living subject matter thought too complex and dynamic to be meaningfully analyzed by logic driven computers In this long overdue study historian Joseph November explores the early attempts in the 1950s and 1960s to computerize biomedical research in the United States Computers and biomedical research are now so intimately connected that it is difficult to imagine when such critical work was offline Biomedical Computing transports readers back to such a time and investigates how computers first appeared in the research lab and doctor s office November examines the conditions that made possible the computerization of biology including strong technological institutional and political support from the National Institutes of Health and shows not only how digital technology transformed the life sciences but also how the intersection of the two led to important developments in computer architecture and software design The history of this phenomenon has been only vaguely understood November s thoroughly researched and lively study makes clear for readers the motives behind computerizing the study of life and how that technology profoundly affects biomedical research today Math for Mystics Renna

Shesso,2007-04-01 Much of math history comes to us from early astrologers who needed to be able to describe and record what they saw in the night sky Whether you were the king s court astrologer or a farmer marking the best time for planting timekeeping and numbers really mattered Mistake a numerical pattern of petals and you could be poisoned Lose the rhythm of a sacred dance or the meter of a ritually told story and the intricately woven threads that hold life together were spoiled Ignore the celestial clock of equinoxes and solstices and you d risk being caught short of food for the winter Shesso s friendly tone and clear grasp of the information make the math go down easy in this marvelous book Engineering in K-12

Meltdown Edward E. Gordon, 2005-09-30 This is an indictment of current management and education practices that are creating a shortage of skilled labour The march of technological development and globalisation continues to put pressure on all national economies bringing opportunity for some and marginalisation for others Nations will need to confront two coming economic shocks a rise in the retired population and a shortage of young well educated people to fill a rising number of highly skilled technology related jobs Ed Gordon marshals vast amounts of data to illustrate how these trends are quickly converging creating a labour vacuum with potentially disastrous consequences In The 2010 Meltdown Gordon sounds a wake up call to anyone with a stake in our economic future Beyond the demographic issues he notes that such cultural factors as Wall Street s obsession with short term results and the neglect of maths and science skills at school are contributing to a fundamental mismatch between labour supply and demand But the news is not all grim Gordon highlights innovative initiatives in training education and community development in the U S and around the world that can serve as models for positive Contemporary Research and Perspectives on Early Childhood Mathematics Education Iliada Elia, Joanne Mulligan, Ann Anderson, Anna Baccaglini-Frank, Christiane Benz, 2018-02-21
