

REVIEW QUESTIONS

Note: Questions 6-2, 6-7, and 6-8 require knowledge about the relation between the area under the marginal cost curve and total costs. This relation is not examined in detail in the book. An instructor should review this relation in class before assigning these problems.

6-1. What four basic conditions characterize a competitive market?

- A large number of either actual or potential buyers and sellers.
- Product homogeneity.
- Rapid dissemination of accurate information at low cost.
- Free entry and exit in the market.

6-2. The short-run marginal cost of the Ohio Bag Company is $2Q$. Price is $100. The company operates in a competitive industry. Currently, the company is producing 40 units per period. What is the optimal short-run output? Calculate the profits that Ohio Bag is losing through suboptimal output.

The optimal short-run output is where marginal cost = marginal revenue (in this case price). Therefore, the optimal output is 50 units. Current profits are $TR - TC = $4,000 - $1,600 = $2,400$. Note: assuming no fixed costs, total costs are equal to the area under the marginal cost curve (area = $1/2BH$). Profits with optimal output = $$5,000 - $2,500 = $2,500$. The firm is forgoing $100 through suboptimal output choice.

6-3. Should a company ever produce an output if the managers know it will lose money over the period? Explain.

The firm should operate in the short run, as long as it obtains enough revenue to cover its variable costs. Revenue in excess of variable costs helps to cover fixed costs (which are incurred even if the firm does not operate).

Market Structures Chapter Answer:

Market Structure Analysis James H. Myers, Edward Tauber, 2011-08-15 Market Structure and Industrial Performance Claudio R. Frischtak, Richard S. Newfarmer, John H. Dunning, 1994 Unemployment, Market Structure and Growth Rüdiger Wapler, 2012-12-06 In his Ph D thesis Rüdiger Wapler analyses the causes of the persistently high unemployment rates especially in continental Europe Particular emphasis is placed on imperfect labour and product markets on the one hand and on the numerous links between unemployment innovations and growth on the other Hence Rüdiger Wapler provides an important contribution towards a better understanding of both the development of labour markets as well as the dynamics of growth To aid readers with only little prior knowledge of labour markets the book presents the most common theories of unemployment 1 trade union models in which union bargaining power leads to wages above their market clearing level 2 efficiency wage models in which employers voluntarily pay higher wages in order to motivate or discipline their workers or to reduce the job turnover rate as well as 3 matching models in which unemployment is caused by the continuous turnover of jobs and workers In addition emphasis is placed on the fact that labour needs to be treated as heterogeneous a fact often neglected in the literature Subsequently these labour market foundations are integrated with modern theories of innovations and growth making the approach much more relevant and plausible Without doubt the generalisations of the models performed by Rüdiger Wapler show that there are limits to such formal analysis Due to the increasing number of interdependencies it is doubtful whether even more complex models provide additional usable insights

Matching Services to Markets H.B. Casanova, 2016-05-09 This book begins an adventure wherein the author outlines for us the particular shape our minds impose on that journey he takes as his analytic the human sensorium the panoply of sensory channels sight hearing touch etc we use to grasp our world His primary insight is that our sensorium does not beyond immediate social groups present smooth mirror like vistas of our socially networked world Contrariwise he shows that this uniquely human array of channels presents a mosaic of disparate inputs with subtle fissures and sutures between and among them That more sophisticated view of our sensory apparatus allows him to describe with great practicality the fissured segmented architectures we inject into our enterprises and above all our markets These insights particularly illuminate the revolution reshaping our understanding of the basic couplet of value exchange driving markets Buying and selling In this revolution a more telling focus on services as catalysts of value exchange is supplanting the traditional terms goods and product as the architecture of that very human sensorium broached above modulates value exchange across the chain of institutional need in markets Armed with this novel set of insights we come away with a far better sense of what is happening overhead as we work out our missions and careers amid our socially constructed edifices enterprises institutions and their battlegrounds our markets

Technology and Market Structure John Sutton, 2001-01-26

John Sutton sets out a unified theory that encompasses two major approaches to studying market while generating a series of novel predictions as to how markets evolve Traditionally the field of industrial organization has relied on two unrelated theories the cross section theory and the growth of firms theory to explain cross industry differences in concentration and within industry skewness The two approaches are based on very different mathematical structures and few researchers have attempted to relate them to each other In this book John Sutton unifies the two approaches through a theory that rests on three simple principles The first two a survivor principle that says that firms will not pursue loss making strategies and an arbitrage principle that says that if a profitable opportunity is available some firm will take it suffice to define a set of possible outcomes The third the symmetry principle says that the strategy used by a new entrant into any submarket depends neither on the entrants identity nor on its history in other submarkets This allows researchers to bring together the roles of strategic interactions and of independence effects The result is that the considerations motivating the cross section tradition and those motivating the growth of firms tradition both drop out within a single game theoretic model This book follows Sutton s Sunk Costs and Market Structure published by MIT Press in 1991
