In Vitro Fertilization Vincent Ellwood,2018-12-15 Did you know that 7.3 million women and men in the U.S are facing fertility issues If you're worried about being able to get pregnant you're not alone And you never have to be Wherever you are there's a fertility center nearby that can provide you the care and support you may need The In Vitro Fertilization IVF procedure is the process of joining a sperm and an egg outside of your body and inside a culture dish in a laboratory Still no matter how prepared you think you are for an IVF procedure it's always helpful to review the facts In vitro fertilization or IVF is a technological advancement in the medical arena in response to the alarming rate of infertility in developed countries The concept was pioneered by Patrick Steptoe and Dr Robert Edwards a Cambridge physiologist late in the 1960s and about ten years later the first IVF baby was delivered in the UK IVF treatment demands a high level of expertise and attention to detail as well as a precise coordinated effort between you your partner and your IVF team IVF was invented primarily to help women that suffer infertility due to blocked or diseased uterine tubes but over time the application of the procedure has been extended to cover cases like endometriosis hostile cervical mucus and a host of other infertility problems It is even applied now in cases where the husband or male partner suffers from a low sperm count albeit the results with the latter have not been particularly impressive Like every other man made procedure IVF has its own share of limitations and adverse effects The success rate of the procedure and the risk of suffering an ectopic pregnancy a pregnancy that implants and develops outside the uterine cavity and almost always ends up with ruptured uterine tube are two of such issues Also with IVF pregnancy does not always guarantee birth Miscarriages and ectopic pregnancy tend to be higher with this procedure compared to the general population Losing the pregnancy from an IVF procedure is fairly common although no general estimate exists while the occurrence of ectopic pregnancy from IVF is put at 5 10% of all IVF pregnancies Another issue with in vitro fertilization is the success rate The recorded successes for IVF procedures vary from place to place though no figure is considered high anywhere For every couple that resort to IVF and get a happy outcome there are several more couples that find their infertility problem intractable Albeit the technological basis of IVF is getting better by the day as more facts become clear about IVF leading to better results with IVF attempts the figures cited in most leading IVF centers are in this order an eight to ten percent chance of pregnancy if only one embryo is implanted in the woman's uterus a twenty percent chance if two embryos are implanted and a thirty percent chance of getting pregnant with three embryos implanted For medical reasons the number of embryos implanted rarely goes above three or four However it is imperative to reiterate here that pregnancy as with normal conditions does not always guarantee birth According to a study of approximately 156 000 women the average live birth rate for the first cycle was 29 5 percent This is comparable to the success rates for a natural cycle in couples with healthy fertility Your best odds for success may come from repeated treatment cycles This same study found that after six IVF cycles the cumulative live birth rate was 65 3 percent These six cycles usually took place over two years Age does play an important role in your success as does the reason for your infertility Using an egg donor will also affect your success Despite the fact that doctors and others in the medical field can't make promises or guarantees about IVF yet it is obvious that the procedure has put joy on the faces of many couples and still holds hope for those waiting for it
