- 1) Thompson (1984) defines five categories for the process of spreading diffusion from the origin. Source is the starting location; transmission is what the person who carries the information is doing; link is the path; target is the person or place that receives the information; flow is the speed of the process. The original source and spreading mechanism is the only way to spread your message (prevent other messages from being)
- 2) Thompson also describes diffusion as occurring on the basis of two types of patterns:
 - One-to-one means you directly or indirectly know the frequency or degree of information
 - Many-to-many means you are not in control of your message, you are just a member in the system (people who are the target group of the message)
- 3) There are four variables to which you can refer to in order to be able to communicate your message:
 - Content is what is said, channel is how it is said, context is where it is said, control is who is in charge of the message
 - Content is what is said, channel is how it is said, context is where it is said, control is who is in charge of the message
- 4) Thompson also says that communication is the act of conveying information from one person to another (the act of conveying information from one person to another)
