

THE LEWIS & CLARK Expedition

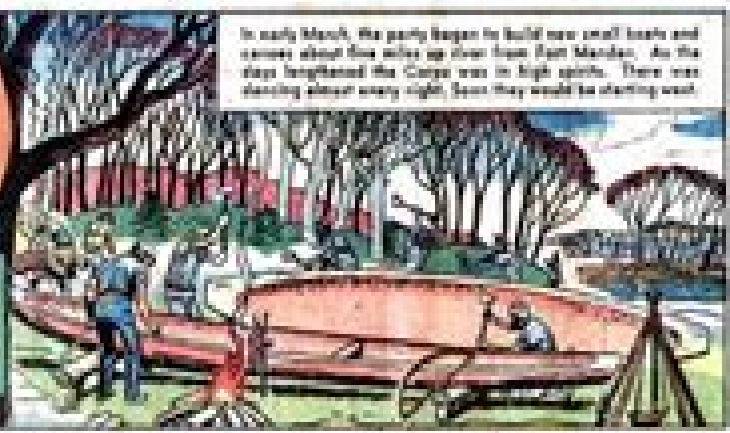

TEXT BY Joy Edgar

It was spring. The river was breaking up. Great wedges of drift and pease were cast in the air, flying north. Out on the river the Indians hunted buffalo on the ice floes. The great boats, attempting to cross on the ice, sometimes were trapped when the ice broke up. Indians were skilful at ice hunting. The party's small boats had been frozen right all winter. Now all hands were mustered to cut them loose.

Lewis and Clark were soon to depart for almost unknown country. All winter they had been gathering information about the way west. The information needed for to the west to the country of the Shoshones to the Rocky mountains. On buffalo skin, is the road and is what the Indians draw crude pictures for the Captains—the first road maps of the country's west.

But within a week, Clark learned was happy for progress. He was a Frenchman in the Captains trying to see why. And he agreed to Lewis and Clark's terms.

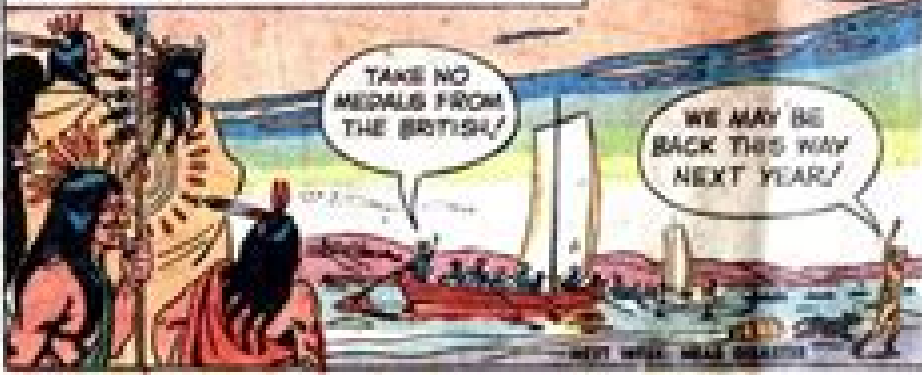

Shortly before the spring departure, One-Be made his peace with the Captains. They gave him a medal, flag, shirt and some red cloth.

The DEPARTURES

There were two departures from Fort Mandan April 8, 1805. One party went south to St. Louis. The other, the main group of explorers, went north and west to the Pacific. The southbound boat carried government dispatches, letters to friends, wishes for President Jefferson and the two privates, Read and Newman, authorized to be discharged.

Westward bound! The Captains now had six small canoes and two large barges. In smaller boats and spirits, the Corps was far different from the ill-disciplined party that had left West River almost a year before. Everyone was eager to push on to the western mountains. Men obeyed orders. There was no discontent. All were eager for success.
