

EMC<sup>2</sup> Symmetrix System Viewer - VMAX 40K

CONFIGURATION

The VMAX 40K array configurations are designed for extensive storage environments. The array configurations include at least one system bay that can house from one to eight engines, and a number of half or full populated storage bays, depending on the number of engines in the array. Engaged into the one full controlling unit, that provides control, CPU power, FibreChannel (host) and iSCSI connectivity to drives in the array.

The maximum array configuration also depends on the type of drive array architecture chosen: 6, 10, or 12 lane. If one 12-lane drive bay is used, the maximum array configuration includes an eight-lane system bay and 12 storage bays. If four 6-lane (24 drive bays) are configured, the maximum configuration consists of a system bay and 48 drive bays. Both bay types can be used within the array but not within the same storage bay.

Each bay contains storage bays and dedicated control bays connected to a dedicated engine in the system bay. Depending on the size the bays connect to the engine, they are referred to as sub-engine or dedicated CAGs.

System bay operates as an array management control interface for arrays with three or more engines. The second, physically separated system bay is added when a third (three 24, 10 or three 24, or second three 24) is added to the array. That engine and an subsequent engine are added to the second system bay. The duplicated system bay placement is suitable for data centers that cannot accommodate large, contiguous array placements. The maximum distance between both system bays is 20 km (12.1 mi).
