Carey,2019-08-15 Whereas the cerebral specialization for skilled manual actions praxis seems closely linked to dominance for language with both functions left lateralized in the vast majority of humans the neural correlates of hand preference are still less well understood Indeed as a combination of inherited and non inherited genomic factors i e direct parental and concealed environmental contributions handedness in contrast to language is less likely to have strong genetic indices and clearly lateralized functional organization What about eye dominance unimanual and bimanual object manipulation and gestures or attentional systems and the related egocentric or allocentric coding of space Are these different categories functionally and structurally interconnected Is their development and contribution to task performance linked even if they are differently lateralized How are they connected to language learning or its development In trying to understand these relationships and their neural underpinnings we obtain a new insight into fundamental human behaviors which depend either on shared or distinct cerebral resources that must nevertheless be harmonized by higher order cerebral processing In this Research Topic we assembled a dozen of original research contributions as well as articles with more theoretically driven perspectives that directly speak to these issues Hopefully this work will serve as a foundation for further discussions and will stimulate new research in this fascinating domain The Economist ,2003 Research in Education ,1974 and for predicting this crop's behavior in the field. This is certainly the case for grapevine Vitis vinifera L., one of the most largely cultivated fruit crops in the world. The cultivation of this species is facing challenging scenarios driven by climate change including increases in atmospheric carbon dioxide (CO<sub>2</sub>), solar radiation and earth surface temperature and decreases of water and nutrient availability. All these events will potentially affect the grapevine phenology, physiology and metabolism in many growing regions and ultimately affect the quality of their fruits and of the most important derived product, the wine. The sequencing of the grapevine genome has given rise to a new era characterized by the generation of large scale data that requires complex computational analyses. Numerous transcriptomic and metabolomic studies have been performed in the past fifteen years providing insights into the gene circuits that control the accumulation of all sorts of metabolites in grapevines. From now on, the integration of two or more omics will allow depicting gene transcript metabolite networks from a more holistic, i.e. systems perspective. This eBook attempts to support this new direction by gathering innovative studies that assess the impact of genotypes, the environment and agronomical practices on fruits at the same scale. The works hereby collected are part of a Research Topic covering the use of omics driven strategies to understand how environmental factors and agronomical practices including microclimate modification (e.g. sunlight incidence or temperature, water availability and irrigation) and postharvest management affect fruit development and composition. These studies report well settled transcriptomic and metabolomic methods in addition to newly developed techniques addressing proteome profiles, genome methylation landscapes and ionomic signatures, some of which attempt to tackle the influence of terroir, i.e. the synergic effect of micro climate, soil composition, grape genotype and vineyard practices. A few reviews and opinions are included that focus on the advantages of applying network theory in grapevine research. Studies on vegetative organs in their relation to fruit development and on fruit derived cell cultures are also considered. ERS-1 Study '94 Final Workshop Proceedings, 1997

Global Agricultural and Food Marketing in a Global Context: Advancing Policy, Management, and Innovation

Maiwashe-Tagwi, Aluwani, Mawela, Ailweli Solomon, Chauke, Phineas Khazamula, 2023-03-20. Over 70% of food production is in the hands of farmers; however, numerous studies have shown that smallholder farmers do not have access to markets. The reasons for this failure have been attributed to a lack of financial resources and infrastructure. To date, no one has questioned the role that graduates, academics, agricultural economists and agricultural extension officials play in the plight of market access. Global Agricultural and Food Marketing in a Global Context: Advancing Policy, Management and Innovation discusses key aspects of the agricultural marketing context including the policy environment, the available local markets and how they operate, the conditions and requirements for international trade, the logistic system operations and the technology developments in marketing. Covering topics such as produce, food production and digital marketing, this reference work is ideal for farmers, government officials, policymakers, researchers, scholars, academicians, practitioners, educators and students.
