London Journal James Boswell, 2018-12-19 Even if James Boswell hadn't written The Life of Johnson he would be famous for this memoir of eighteenth century London life Boswell arrived in the great metropolis from his native Edinburgh in 1762 and he kept a daily journal of his nine month sojourn Bawdy witty and brimming with fascinating details the accounts range from his illicit encounters with prostitutes to his momentous meeting with Samuel Johnson Boswell's London diary disappeared for 150 years finally turning up in the 1920s as the literary find of the twentieth century Unlike his other journals it escaped nineteenth century bowdlerization allowing the author's voice to emerge with strikingly modern candor Boswell writes frankly of his struggles with depression and his sexual obsessions His painstaking records of the lively repartee of his mentor's literary circle formed the backbone of The Life of Johnson and just as that book proved him a worthy biographer so this one shows him an equally captivating subject
