An example of a Level 1 answer

I know the cartoon is critical of the leading countries involved in the peace talks because it shows key leaders carrying their ‘national sentiment’ to the peace ‘soup’ or talks. The people of France and Britain especially wanted to punish Germany for the war.

An example of a Level 2 answer

The cartoon is critical of the leading countries involved in the peace talks because it shows key European leaders selfishly carrying their ‘national sentiments’ with them to the peace ‘soup’ that represents the talks. The cartoon implies the leaders of these countries were bringing their own grudges and selfish aims to the talks (such as France wanting to punish Germany for the war, or Britain wanting to take over Germany’s colonies), unlike Woodrow Wilson trying to bring countries together with his ‘sweet oil of brotherhood’.
