

CHAPTER 1

Review

1.1 In your own words, what are the differences between product testing and statistical testing?

Product testing includes: (a) The goal of the test procedure is different. Different product testing is designed to discover the difference of a component under consideration that would result in a successful test. Statistical testing is intended to measure fluctuations of a component's properties that are independent of the measured value. (b) The elements change in different product testing since the material is the object, or rather it will be used as the test product. Statistical testing tests individual specimens always designed to statistically determine and to make prediction of the material with the integral material property.

1.2 What are the shortcomings, differences between statistical, planning, and process test?

Statistical testing is different from other types of testing in that it is applied based on statistical theory of a system under the test. Planning is performed before change without considering error under the test result. Planning inherently involves breaking up the test and the variation of the coefficient. Different from the other types of testing procedure, the plan is predetermined, but the implementation of the test is dependent on the system.

1.3 What are the differences between engineering stress, true stress, engineering strain, and true strain for loading along a single axis.

$$\sigma_{eng} = \text{engineering stress} = \frac{\text{load}}{\text{initial cross-sectional area}} = \frac{P}{A_0} \quad (1-1a)$$

$$\sigma_{true} = \text{true stress} = \frac{\text{load}}{\text{instantaneous cross-sectional area}} = \frac{P}{A} \quad (1-2a)$$

$$\epsilon_{true} = \text{true strain} = \ln \frac{\text{final length}}{\text{initial length}} = \ln \frac{l_1}{l_0} \quad (1-2b)$$

1.4 Under what conditions in Eq. 1-1 valid? What makes it no longer valid if these conditions are not met?

Equation 1-1 is valid only for engineering stress-strain relation for a single axis test for loading in uniaxial tension. Under tension, the stress is constant for all the uniaxial tension loading. Any other dependence on variation of the test region that prevented by Eq. 1-1 is not valid. Under stress, the stress is the permission of the copyright owner is required.
