For example, in 2001, JAMA published a study that found that the use of rosiglitazone was associated with an increased risk of heart failure. This study, which was conducted by a team of researchers from the University of Michigan, was one of the first to suggest that the drug might be harmful. Since then, JAMA has continued to publish articles that have raised concerns about the safety of the drug, including a 2006 study that found that the use of rosiglitazone was associated with an increased risk of heart failure in patients with type 2 diabetes.
