shows how managerial software fails and when it does what sorts of disastrous consequences ensue from the Boeing 737 MAX crashes to a deadly self driving car to PowerPoint propaganda and beyond Yet just because the tech industry is currently breaking its core promise does not mean the industry cannot change or that the risks posed by managerial software should necessarily persist into the future Campbell argues that the solution is tech workers with actual expertise establishing industry wide principles of ethics and safety that corporations would be forced to follow Fatal Abstraction is a stirring rebuke of the tech industry s current managerial excesses and also a hopeful glimpse of what a world shaped by good software can offer

Expressing and Describing Surprise Agnès Celle, Laure Lansari, 2017-07-18 Among emotions surprise has been extensively studied in psychology In linguistics surprise like other emotions has mainly been studied through the syntactic patterns involving surprise lexemes However little has been done so far to correlate the reaction of surprise investigated in psychological approaches and the effects of surprise on language This cross disciplinary volume aims to bridge the gap between emotion cognition and language by bringing together nine contributions on surprise from different backgrounds psychology human agent interaction linguistics Using different methods at different levels of analysis all contributors concur in defining surprise as a cognitive operation and as a component of emotion rather than as a pure emotion Surprise results from expectations not being met and is therefore related to epistemicity Linguistically there does not exist an unequivocal marker of surprise Surprise may be either described by surprise lexemes which are often associated with figurative language or it may be expressed by grammatical and syntactic constructions Originally published as a special issue of Review of Cognitive Linguistics 13 2 2015
