

PROTEIN SYNTHESIS

1. Transcription is the process of copying a gene's DNA sequence into a messenger RNA (mRNA) sequence. This step occurs in the nucleus of the cell.

2. During transcription, the DNA double helix unwinds, and one strand is used as a template to synthesize a complementary mRNA strand. The mRNA strand is then processed and transported out of the nucleus.

3. Translation is the process of synthesizing a protein from an mRNA sequence. This step occurs in the cytoplasm of the cell, where ribosomes are located. The ribosome reads the mRNA sequence and uses it to assemble a chain of amino acids, which form the protein.

THE GENETIC CODE

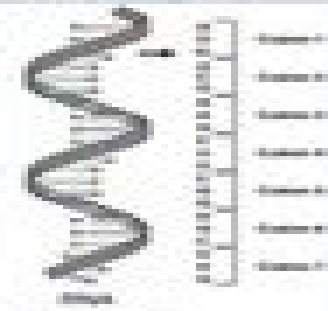

"One codon at a time"

1. Biological systems use sequences of three nucleotides, called codons, to specify the amino acids that are used to build proteins. Each codon codes for a specific amino acid.

2. The genetic code is the set of rules that defines how sequences of nucleotide base pairs (A, T, C, G) are translated to the amino acid sequences of proteins.

3. The genetic code is universal, meaning that it is the same for all living organisms. This is evidence of a common ancestor for all life on Earth.

4. The genetic code is a triplet code, meaning that each amino acid is specified by a sequence of three nucleotides.

"One gene - one protein"

1. Each gene contains the instructions for building a specific protein. The sequence of nucleotides in a gene determines the sequence of amino acids in the protein.

2. The sequence of amino acids in a protein determines its shape and function. Proteins are the molecules that carry out most of the work in a cell.

3. A copy of the genetic code can be found on page 119.
