Working in Health & Social Care Q&A

2023

General Practitioner (GP) - ANS-a doctor who does not specialise in a specific branch of medicine but provides ongoing treatment and preventative care in the community for a variety of medical problems that may be experienced by individuals of all ages.

Preventative care - ANS-care and education that aims to ensure people remain healthy, and are aware of factors that can lead to illness and poor health. It includes screening and vaccination programmes.

Consultant - ANS-a senior doctor, normally based in a hospital, who provides specialist expert healthcare support in their area of expertise.

Nurse Practitioner - ANS-provides expert consultancy service to patients and their carers. They contribute to the management and development of the care provision. They also undertake research and contribute to the education and training of other members of staff.

Adult Nurse - ANS-works with adults of all ages, who may have a wide range of physical health conditions. They may be based in hospitals, clinics or GP practices, or work for specialist organisations such as the armed forces. Many work with people in their own homes. They will often plan individual care, carry out healthcare procedures and treatments and evaluate their effectiveness. They also work to promote good health by running clinics and health education programmes on topics such as giving up smoking or weight loss.

Mental Health Nurse - ANS-they specialise in mental health work in a range of settings. These may include psychiatric units in hospitals, community healthcare centres, day care settings, residential homes and prisons. Remember that most people who experience mental health problems are cared for in the community, not in hospitals.

Children's Nurse - ANS-works with children with a very wide range of medical conditions. Works closely with the child's parents or carers. This is to ensure that, as far as possible, the care provided meets their social, cultural and family needs, as well as addressing their health issues. May work in hospitals but also support children at home.

Learning Disability Nurse - ANS-works mainly with individuals with learning disabilities living in the community rather than in hospitals. This may include supporting people in schools and workplaces, people living at home with their families and people who live in specialist residential settings. They aim to work with people with learning disabilities and their carers to maintain the person's physical and mental health, provide specialist healthcare and support them to live as fulfilling and independent a life as possible.
