Use the meter as specified in the manual; otherwise the protection offered by the multimeter may be impaired.

- Do not use the multimeter with back cover opened. It may cause electric shock.
- Set to a proper range for your measurement.
- Check the test leads for any damaged insulation or broken wires.
- Insert red and black test leads into proper input terminals and ensure good contact between them.
- Do not input signal beyond the rated values of the multimeter; otherwise it may cause electric shock or damage to the multimeter.
- Prohibit switching the range during the voltage or current measurement, for it may cause damage to the multimeter.
- Please use replacement parts with the same model or similar electrical specifications.
- To avoid electric shock, do not apply any voltage above 1000V between GND and grounding.
- Please take caution when working voltage goes above 60VDC or 30VAC RMS.
- To improve the accuracy, please replace the batteries as soon as ⚡ appears.
- Shut off the power timely after the measurements complete. Take out the batteries if not used for a long time.
- Do not use the multimeter in places exposed to high temperature, high moisture. The performance of the multimeter may be compromised if moisture affected.
