For salespeople, physical appearance is important, but there are other things that also go into making a good first impression. For example, I always ^{arrive}~~am arriving~~ at meetings on time. I ^{know}~~am knowing~~ my clients are busy people, and I understand that their time is important. Also, I always call them by name. I even keep names and information about clients in a special file online. In fact, I ^{add}~~am adding~~ information to that file this week.

In the past, I didn't pay much attention to body language. However, I am ^{learning}~~learn~~ to be more conscious of the ways I move and how to use my hands effectively. At every meeting I ^{make}~~am making~~ eye contact - especially when I first greet a client and again when I leave. I practice my greetings in front of the mirror every day. I try to remember to smile. Of course, I also want to look good. I have nice shoes, and I keep them clean and polished. I ^{think}~~am thinking~~ my new haircut makes me look good, too.

Introduction Beyond Rhetorical Questions Irene Koshik, 2005-01-01 This book uses Conversation Analysis methodology to analyze rhetorical and other questions that are designed to convey assertions rather than seek new information It shows how these question sequences unfold interactionally in naturally occurring talk in a variety of settings e.g. friends arguing over the phone parents disciplining children news interviews and second language writing conferences The questions are used across these widely different contexts to perform a number of related social actions such as accusations challenges to prior turns and complaints Those used in institution settings such as teacher student conferences orient to institutional norms and roles and can help accomplish institutional goals e.g. eliciting student error correction Both the interactional context in which these questions are embedded and the known epistemic authority of the questioner play a role in our understanding of these questions i.e. what social actions the question is accomplishing in a particular interaction of the second opinion an opinion that is becoming general around the world as this century comes to an end and history begins to cast its appraising eye upon the intellectual harvest of our era A good example of this opinion may be found in the admiration for Feyerabend's philosophy of science expressed by Grover Maxwell in his contribution to this volume Maxwell recalling his own intellectual transformation says also that it was Feyerabend who confirmed my then incipient suspicions that most of the foundations of currently fashionable philosophy and even a great deal of the methodology to which many scientists pay enthusiastic lip service are based on simple mistake assumptions whose absurdity becomes obvious once attention is directed at them And lest the reader thinks as many still do that however sharp Feyerabend's attacks upon the philosophical establishment may have been he does not offer a positive philosophy a complaint made by C A Hooker and some of the other contributors Paul Churchland argues otherwise
